As a Trust we are committed to ensuring that Methodist Independent Schools Trust is a fair employer in its approach to equality of opportunity in the workplace and that all staff receive equal pay for equal work regardless of gender. Teaching staff are paid against a structured framework that rewards them for their level of experience and wider contribution to the school within which they work. Pay for Support staff is reviewed regularly to ensure that our rates are competitive and fairly reflect the work undertaken.

At Methodist Independent Schools Trust, the gender pay gap does not stem from paying men and women differently for the same or equivalent work, it is the result of roles in which men and women work within the Trust and the salaries that these roles attract. Equality of opportunity is central to the Trust's ethos and values and whilst Methodist Independent School Trust's gender pay gap is below the overall national average for the UK, we will continue to ensure that our policies and practices are regularly reviewed to ensure that this aim is central to all employment decisions.
